SECTION V-----

For the time being novelty of present claims cannot be acknowledged since although the specific parameters given in claim 1 are not expressly mentioned in the "X"-documents cited in the ISR one cannot rule out that the compositions taught therein are covered by the scope of present claims (see e.g. WO 97/20920 (1) (see e.g. abstract, figures and pages 6 and 7 or WO 97/22691 (2), page 12 and example 2). Moreover, even if presently claimed subject-matter was novel present claims still would be open to an objection for lack of an inventive activity since the principle underlying present application, i.e. the use of thermostable enzymes is already disclosed in the prior art (see e.g. (2), page 3, 2nd paragraph).
